HEAVIEST LOSS AT PINES CHURCH

Thousands of dollars damage in Gettysburg and Adams county was caused by a cyclone which accompanied a severe rain storm late Saturday afternoon.

Although the twister's greatest damage was at the Pines Lutheran church where the annual Young People's conference was in progress, the force of the blow was felt from Gettysburg to Biglerville.

Five automobiles, parked under large trees which were either uprooted or blown down, were damaged at the Pines. One of the machines, a large sedan, owned by J. H. Kadel, West Middle street, was literally broken in half when a large poplar tree crashed upon it.

Old Trees Damaged
Twenty-eight trees, one of them an oak, the age of which was estimated at more than 100 years, were blown down when the cyclone struck at the Pines.

None of the 108 children and 23 adults at the Young People's conference was injured by the gale, all of them being in the Pines community hall for supper when the blow came. Panic reigned within the community hall as the roar of the cyclone and the noise of the big trees crashing filled the hall with a deafening din.

The older persons finally succeeded in quieting the children, and allowed them to go outside after it was seen that the cyclonic wind had spent itself.

The top of the large sedan, of T. J. Winebrenner, Baltimore street, was broken when a massive oak tree fell on it, and the cars of Grantis Hooper, York Springs; the Rev. J. M. Davies, near Munsterstown, and Miss Mary Sponseller, Gettysburg, also were damaged in varying degrees.

The falling trees broke the fences around the old and new cemeteries at the Pines Lutheran church and broke a number of windows in the church. Several tombstones were knocked down and the base of one of them was broken.

In order to remove the wreckage of Kadel's machine, it was necessary to chop away a large number of branches on the fallen poplar and then jack up the trunk of the tree. It was also necessary to follow the same procedure to remove Winebrenner's car from under the oak tree.

Raymond Ross, 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Ross, who reside near the Pines church, was in the meadow of his father's farm, driving cattle into the barn, when the cyclone struck. "The wind blew" (Continued on Page Eight)

WIDOW KILLED WHILE WALKING ACROSS HIGHWAY

Mrs. Amelia Group, 78,
Idaville, Walks To Death From Church.

STRUCK BY CAR SATURDAY NIGHT

After leaving services at the Idaville Evangelical church, Saturday evening at 8:30 o'clock, Mrs. Amelia Group, 78, of Idaville, was fatally injured when knocked down by a light coupe driven by Roy E. Coldsmith, Gardners.

Mrs. Group, widow of Jesse Linger Group, died at the Carlisle hospital at 11:30 o'clock, an hour and a half after she was admitted. She suffered fractures of both legs and the pelvis. Shock also was a contributing factor.

Mrs. Group, who lived opposite the Evangelical church of which she was a life-long member, was in the middle of the highway when she was run down.

Did Not See Woman

Coldsmith told Patrolman H. S. Roberts, of the local sub-station of the state highway motor patrol, who was on patrol and arrived at the scene half an hour after the accident occurred, that he was traveling north on the Carlisle road at a speed of about 30 miles an hour.

He said he noticed the people leaving church and passed a number of them walking south on the highway. He said he was watching the pedestrians walking along the edge of the highway, and failed to see Mrs. Group until his car was within 25 feet of the woman.

Coldsmith told the patrolman that he swerved his car in an effort to avoid striking the woman, but it was too late to avoid the accident.

Roy Spangler, Centre Mills, who was with Coldsmith, corroborated the latter's story, Patrolman Roberts said.

Conscious Until End

Mrs. Group remained conscious after the accident. The Rev. H. K. Hosterman, of Mt. Holly Springs, who conducted the Saturday evening service at the Idaville Evangelical church, took the injured woman to the Carlisle hospital. Mrs. Group remained conscious almost to the end.

Mrs. Group's husband died three years ago and since then she had resided alone in Idaville.

Bride, 19, Killed Few Hours After Marriage; Groom Dies of Injuries

Youthful Couple Was En Route To New York
On Honeymoon When Machine Is Side-
swiped And Upset At Twin Bridges, 9 O'clock Saturday Night.

GIRL DIES WITH CRUSHED CHEST; BOY EXPIRES EARLY THIS MORNING

Kenneth Connor, 18, of Fairmount, West Virginia, and his bride of five hours, the former Miss Clara Farr, 19, of Keisterville, Pa., both members of the sophomore class of the Fairmount normal school, are dead as the result of an automobile accident on the Harrisburg road, seven miles north of here, near Twin Bridges, at 9 o'clock, Saturday evening.

Mrs. Connor, daughter of Mrs. Florence Danley, of Keisterville, suffered a crushed chest and internal injuries and died at the Warner hospital seven minutes after being taken there.

Her youthful husband succumbed to a fractured neck at the hospital at 1:40 o'clock this morning.

Secretly Married Saturday

At 4 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, the young couple was secretly married by the Rev. Dr. J. Henry Harms, pastor of St. John's Lutheran church, Hagerstown, Maryland, at the parsonage.

They were accompanied by Connor's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Cunningham, of Fairmount, and after the ceremony the four started for New York city on a week-end honeymoon trip for the newly-weds.

According to Patrolman J. G. Warren, of the local sub-station of the state highway motor patrol, who investigated the accident, Connor was driving his uncle's sedan at the time of the accident, with his bride beside him. Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham were in the rear seat.

Machines Sideswipe

Arthur H. Leh, 44, of Allentown, driver of the other machine which figured in the accident, was traveling south on the Harrisburg road. Accompanied by Mrs. Leh, Mrs. Annie Kresge, of South Bethlehem; Mrs. Elsie Snyder and Mrs. Rose Goepfert, both of Allentown, Leh was en route to Gettysburg to attend a meeting of the Sons of Veterans' past commanders' association here, Saturday evening.

In passing, the machines sideswiped. The car driven by Connor swerved to the west side of the highway, struck a ditch and an embankment and rolled over four or five times, finally crashing against a tree about 15 feet from the highway.

Leh's machine was turned around by the impact and upset along the east side of the highway.

Dies In Hospital

Mrs. Connor suffered a crushed chest and internal injuries. She was unconscious when removed from the wreckage of the Cunningham car and brought to the Warner hospital by Benjamin Carter, near whose home the fatality occurred. She died without regaining consciousness seven minutes after she was brought to the hospital.

Connor suffered a broken neck and his body was paralyzed below the neck. He was brought to the hospital by W. H. "Dutch" Armor, of Harrisburg, formerly of Gettysburg.

Although Connor's neck was broken and practically his entire body was paralyzed, he remained conscious after the accident and almost up to the time of his death. His mother, Mrs. John McC. Connor, who arrived in Gettysburg early Sunday morning, was with her son when he died.

Newlyweds Were Classmates
Mrs. Cunningham, who suffered contusions and shock as a result of the accident, also was admitted as a patient to the hospital. She was discharged this morning. Her husband also suffered from shock but was not admitted to the hospital.

Connor and his bride were members of the sophomore class at the Fairmount state normal school.

Neither Mrs. Connor's mother nor the parents of Connor knew of the wedding until after the accident. Miss Martha McKay, superintendent of the Warner hospital, informed Mrs. Connor of her son's wedding after the mother arrived at the hospital early Sunday morning.

None of the occupants of Leh's machine was seriously injured. Mrs. Leh suffered bruises on her back and shock, and the others escaped with varying degrees of (Continued on Page 2)

GOOD DEEDS, FAITH BRING IMMORTALITY

Rev. Mr. Eslinger
Urges Parishioners
Not To Overlook
Forgiveness.

PASTOR CITES MANY INSTANCES

"The Immortality of Good Deeds" was the theme of the sermon delivered by the Rev. E. L. Eslinger, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, Sunday morning.

"The text was taken the Revelation 13:14, 'And their works do follow them.' 'Material things change their form, location and state, but they can not be utterly destroyed,' said the Rev. Mr. Eslinger. 'If this is true of material substances, is it not reasonable that the acts of our lives should in some way be in evidence after we have passed off the stage of action?'

"Faith Needed
"We must not lose sight of the real ground of forgiveness and entrance into the Kingdom of God. 'By grace are ye saved, through faith.' Salvation is by faith and not by works alone. But where faith is it shows itself in good works, works that prove our faith and meet Divine approval."

The Rev. Mr. Eslinger then repeated the stories of the poor widow who gave all her money to the treasury, and the woman anointing Christ's head with oil at the home of Simon the leper, as illustrations of the proper spirit with which to do good deeds.

"The mother giving her life for her child; the physician going down to his death to discover a sure remedy for disease; the missionary of the cross surrendering all the comforts of civilization and being exposed to the dangers of the fevers of the tropics—what heroic victims have gone down to death for others! And it is always true that the blood of the martyrs becomes the seeds of the church."

"Unselfishness Important
"The virtue of our deed depends upon its unselfishness. This costly oilment was given to Christ and the poor woman's offering went to the temple treasury, not to be seen of men, but unselfishly and unostentatiously to do good. And those who were invited to 'come' had done innumerable acts of kindness in such quiet manner to the most lowly and needy and, as the narrative plainly shows, never thought that God or man noticed the loving deed."

"In the case of Mary she knew her Lord and rendered a personal service to Him. 'But what can I do?' some sincere seeker after truth asks. 'Christ is not here. I see Him not. How then can I render this service to Him?' It is very plain. Listen! He says an act done to a needy soul for His sake and in His name is just as acceptable to Him as if done to Himself in person. So we are to show our love for Christ whom we see not, by loving and doing acts of kindness to our needy brother whom we do see. And in doing this we are serving Him."

In conclusion the pastor said: "These deeds do follow us and the remembrance of them abides here and heaven is made richer because of our helpful lives."

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lloyd, of Everett, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Rice and Dr. and Mrs. M. T. Dill, of Biglerville.

Mrs. Robert Wilkinson, who with her son, Robert, has been a guest of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Lawver, of Biglerville, for some time, returned Sunday to her home at Wellsboro. They were accompanied home by Miss Shirley Lawver, who will spend the week with them.

Harry Heller of Biglerville, was a visitor in Harrisburg Sunday.

Those from this community who attended the quarterly meeting of the religious society of Friends held at Pipe Creek, Maryland, Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Edwin C. Tyson, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic E. Grist, of Flora Dale; Edward Wright, of Quaker Valley; Mrs. Aaron Weidner, of Arendtsville; Frederick Tyson, Gardner R. D., and B. C. Jones, of Bendersville.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Raffensperger had as guests over the week-end at their home in Arendtsville Mrs. Dale Thomas, of New York city; Mr. and Mrs. John Porro, their son, Jack, and Mr. Porro's mother, Mrs. John Porro, Sr., of Steelton.

shock. None of them was admitted to the hospital.

Dr. C. G. Crist, Chambersburg street, acting coroner for Adams county, investigated the accident in the absence of Dr. Edgar A. Miller, Baltimore street, county coroner.

Doctor Crist turned over the information he gathered concerning the accident to Doctor Miller on Sunday morning. Doctor Miller announced that an inquest into Mrs. Connor's death would be held later in the week.

Mrs. Connor's body was taken back to Keisterville, about eight miles from Uniontown, by an undertaker from the latter place, Sunday morning.

Both machines were damaged to the extent of about $400. Both were brought into Gettysburg. Connor's body was shipped to Fairmount this afternoon.

Members of the families of the victims are understood to be planning a joint funeral for Mr. and Mrs. Connor and burying them side by side.

LOCALS SPLIT WEEK-END TILTS

McSherrystown And Arendtsville
Knotted For County
League Lead.

McSherrystown took the lead in the Adams county nremen's baseball league over the week-end by scoring triumphs over Fairfield and Gettysburg. Arendtsville's victory over Centennial enabled the apple-pickers to keep right on the heels of McSherrystown, both sporting undefeated records.

Effective hurling by "Bob" Miller enabled Gettysburg to win easily from Cashtown on Nixon field Saturday afternoon, 10-4. Miller allowed but one hit in the first six innings, but weakened in the finish, coasting in on a big lead secured off the offerings of W. Kuhn and Starnier, Cashtown twirlers.

The locals lost a hard-fought decision to McSherrystown Sunday afternoon before a large crowd when Strausbaugh tallied in the ninth inning with but one out to give the home team a 5-4 decision. Gettysburg hammered Groff for seven hits and had no fewer than twelve men die on the paths. Maust hurried good ball for Gettysburg and would have won with airtight support. In the ninth frame Strausbaugh walked to start the inning. He stole second and took third on J. Weaver's sacrifice. F. Devine and Groff were purposely passed. W. Devine lifted a fly to Guise in center, but it fell safely for a single when the latter misjudged it, Strausbaugh tallying the winning run.

Musselman's home-run with the bases full in the third inning gave Fairfield a temporary lead in its game with McSherrystown Saturday at Fairfield, but the lead was short-lived, McSherrystown forging to the front in the sixth with a five-run attack to win out, 9-5.

New Oxford nosed out Bendersville at New Oxford Saturday. Beamer besting Lerew in a pitchers' duel, 2-1. The winning run was scored in the eighth when Zeigler singled, Britcher sacrificed and Rinehart singled to score Zeigler. Beamer fanned nine men and Lerew eight.

Arendtsville outslugged Centennial in their game at Centennial Saturday to win easily, 13-1.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONFAB IS HELD

Herbert Zepp Is Re-elected President At Annual Gathering, Sunday.

The twenty-sixth annual convention of the First District of the Adams county Sabbath school association was held at the Salem U. B. church on Sunday. Herbert Zepp, president, presided.

About 250 persons attended the afternoon session which was opened with song service by the Rev. W. M. Beattie, devotionals by the Rev. J. Harold Little and the welcome by the Rev. W. M. Beattie. Special musical numbers were given by the York Springs high school club directed by Miss Dorothy Remmel.

Three conferences were held during the afternoon. The adult division was led by Dr. M. Hadwin Fischer; children's division by Mrs. Lloyd Biesacker, and young people's division by Miss Lavene Grove, Harrisburg. Miss Grove gave the address of the afternoon on the topic "Youth Organized for the Church." She said there is "too much organization in the young peoples work and not enough purpose, too much overlapping of effort. The leaders of young people should get together and decide what the young people need to develop their characters and do away with the organizations that are unnecessary. Every church should have a young peoples' adviser that could act as a go-between for the adults and the young people."

Reports were given by Miss Ellen Tipton, treasurer; Mrs. Milton Remmel, children's superintendent; Victor Chamberlain, school administration superintendent; Russel Spangler, adult superintendent. H. T. Baker, president, and T. J. Winebrenner, treasurer of the county association, also spoke. Dr. M. Hadwin Fischer called to the attention of the convention the state convention to be held in Gettysburg in the fall and the various summer camps.

Officers elected for the ensuing year were Herbert E. Zepp, president; Walter A. Snyder, vice president; Ruth Cushman, secretary; Ellen Tipton, treasurer; Mrs. Milton Remmel, superintendent children's division; Mrs. Kenderton S. Lynch, superintendent young people's division; Miss Florence Slonaker, associate young people's superintendent; Victor Chamberlain, school administration and adult departments, and the Rev. W. M. Beattie, Christian education.

H. T. Baker, county president, conducted the installation of new officers.

About 300 attended the evening session which was opened by song service and devotionals by the Rev. W. M. Beattie. The Rev. M. Beattie also sang several solos by request. Miss Grove gave the address of the evening on "Enlisting the Dynamics of Youth."

The convention was closed by benediction pronounced by the Rev. Mr. Beattie.

The White Cockatoo

By Mignon G. Eberhart

SYNOPSIS: Sue Tally must identify herself to her brother Francis by means of a token, without which she cannot claim her share of her father's great fortune. After a series of murders and shootings, the token has been stolen. But Sue "bluffs" Francis, demanding that he first show his identifying token. Meanwhile Jim Sundean, whose regard for Sue has mounted with the danger in which she has been, is warned by David Lorn, a detective employed by Francis Tally, that the police have new reasons for suspecting him of murder. Lorn departs with a mysterious hint that Sue had best delay negotiations with Francis Tally for a few days.

Chapter 43 THE DIVISION

We were to become immediately ranged in two different camps. And it happened just then, when the muffled sound of voices in the parlor became more definite and clear and all at once Sue swept angrily into the lounge.

Francis, angry too and showing it less pleasantly, followed her. His face also flushed, his eyes were narrow back of those studious spectacles, his hands were working nervously.

Sue said every word falling like a brittle little icicle and yet marvelously polite at the same time.

"I hope you don't mind my telling Mr. Lorn and Mr. Sundean of our talk, Francis. You see," she turned to me, "I have asked Francis if he will permit me to have a lawyer represent me. I feel—"

"No reason for it at all," burst in Francis. "I came here from America to settle things with this girl. To give her a chance at five million dollars—and she holds back and prattles about a—"

"I beg you not to interrupt me, Francis." I was faintly amused to note that as Francis grew angrier Sue grew sweeter and cooler, but it was most infuriating sweetness and coolness.

"I'm most grateful to my brother for such an effort," she went on. "Though perhaps it might have been made sooner—before I had been subjected to—" Her sweetness faltered a little there, and she swept on quickly, preferring not to talk of the horror that had dogged her days.

"At the same time, I can't help feeling that just because of the amount of the money involved, it is only fitting and suitable to ask a lawyer to conduct negotiations for me."

Francis's eyes were very narrow; I heard a slight rustle behind me, and I saw him dart a quick glance in that direction, and I had no doubt Madame Grethe had made her appearance.

"Come now, Sue," said Francis rather pleadingly. "All you need to do is to let me look at the token you have. If it is what it is supposed to be, the thing is done. Do be sensible."

"But, Francis," said Sue very sweetly, "is there any particular reason why you refuse me a lawyer?"

There was an instant or two of silence before Francis's gathering rage rose to his lips. Sue attacked so sweetly, so coolly—so gallantly from my own viewpoint, because I knew of her empty hands. I knew of the infirmity of her ground.

"Do you mean," demanded Francis, "that you don't trust me?"

"What a thing to say! What a soft little ripple of laughter that stung Francis and that actually shocked me in its deceiving sweetness. All women can shock you that way."

"Then," said Francis, again glancing past me to where, with a quick following look, I saw Madame Grethe standing, motionless, her green eyes shining—"then," he said heavily, "you do trust me?"

Then Sue, very suddenly, and in a totally easy and meaningless voice, said an extremely odd thing. She said, her eyes then on Francis, and her voice quite flat and even a bit bored:

"Why should I not trust you? For now we see through a glass darkly, but then—" And there she stopped and carefully arranged her crimson scarf at her throat as if it had her entire interest. But her eyes through their dark eyelashes watched Francis.

Francis did not speak. He only looked angry and baffled, and his eyes sought Madame Grethe again.

There was a swift little swish of silk that broke the singularity tense moment. Grethe stepped forward and passed her round silken arm through Sue's.

"Don't you think you are a little overcautious, my dear?" she said smoothly to Sue. "Forgive me for speaking, but I could scarcely help hearing you, you know. For your own good I must say this. It is better for you to do as your brother wishes. Follow the terms of your father's will and prove your identity to your brother and let him take you away. It is only a matter of form. And while I have hesitated to speak before, lest I make you feel unwelcome in this, your only home—still—still you must see what—a what a thing you have brought upon us all."

She paused. I was glad to see that Sue was sternly unmoved. But I think she was still doubtful, still loath to discredit Grethe's motives in her own mind. And Grethe said suavely:

"Think what's waiting for you, dear. Five million dollars—five millions. The things you can buy. The things you can do."

It was just then that Sue's long, purposefully blind loyalty collapsed. She removed her arm quietly from Madame Grethe's clasp.

"Don't think for a moment, Madame Lovschien," she said sweetly, "that I shall forget what you've done. And I'm sure my brother—will feel most grateful to you in your attempt to smooth the way before us."

Grethe looked placid, then faintly puzzled, then suddenly comprehending. Her white lids dropped over her secretive eyes, and she said gravely, as if taking Sue's words at their face value:

"Don't thank me, my dear. I've only done what I could do."

"I'm afraid I'm not thanking you," said Sue quite frankly. "You see, it wasn't altogether kind of you, to keep what my mother—told you a secret from me. It was a reticence which is not of a nature to maintain my confidence in your friendship. You and your husband are the only people in Armeine besides myself who knew of the circumstances of my inheritance."

I think Sue had not actually intended to say so much. Knowing she must fight whether she liked or not, she struck a little too blindly, choosing in her haste a weapon whose sharpness she did not quite comprehend. But its very unexpectedness frightened Madame Grethe.

Though, to be sure, only a close observer might have caught her fright in the sudden leaping of her eyes, in the placative manner in which she addressed Sue and put an end to the situation with less adroitness than one might have expected of her.

"You are tired and unstrung," she said. "Otherwise you would not speak in such a way to me. To your only friend. To—"

"I have other friends," said Sue, cutting into Grethe's soft speech without visible compunction.

"The trouble is we are all tired and nervous and upset, and we'll all feel better." She walked with a swish of green silk to the bell and pushed it with her square, vigorous white thumb.

Blissfully Sue's little smile flashed. I like her being able to achieve it. She said with a quiver of mirth in her voice: "I'm not quarreling. I'm only telling you what I think. I'll go and call Mrs. Byng if we're going to have tea. She won't want to miss it."

She turned quickly toward the stairway, and Lorn started to follow her, but I sprang ahead of him.

"I'll go along," I said, and we were on the stairs before anyone could stop us. I caught a green flicker from Grethe's eyes and heard her saying sharply something about Miss Tally's new acquaintance, and then we passed around the landing.

We turned from the lounge well with its blank galleries and tiny group waiting down below—and went along to Mrs. Byng's door. She knocked. Mrs. Byng did not reply immediately, and I said in a low voice: "Don't knock again for a moment. I want to talk to you."

She glanced up and down the corridor. Away at the end a policeman's blue coat and tight trousers came into view. She said:

"Here in my room."

She opened the door. I've never known why I remembered in that hurried moment to enter it first in order to look about. At any rate, that's what I did while she stood there in the corridor.

The room was empty. No one was about. It was only the quivering of the door to the massive wardrobe that caught my eye.

What dread secret will the old wardrobe reveal, tomorrow?

New Books

By John Selby

New York—Those who read Mabel Dodge Luhan's rich and racy "Lorenzo in Taos" will, doubtless, be eager to hear the Hon. Dorothy Brett's version of D. H. Lawrence's stay in New Mexico and points contiguous.

For it is quite possible that New Mexico has had no resident more innocently adept at stirring up emotional storms than Lawrence, and the rush to print the details continues unabated.

Miss Brett's book is out, entitled "Lawrence and Brett" and written in a sentimental vein that cannot be dismissed but can be condoned. Lawrence was, it must be remembered, the sun and moon (indeed, almost the entire celestial system) to Miss Brett. Every gesture he made had importance for her, and most of them she has recorded. At no time does she attempt to "make a case" for herself.

The book is written in the present tense and resembles nothing so much as a long and ecstatic letter. It is, indeed, dedicated to "The Potential Lover."

More History

There are many histories of the Jews, most of which fell into the classification of dust gatherers—as does most other history. Josef Kastein's "History and Destiny of the Jews" is scarcely a candidate for burial alive, however.

Kastein begins by declaring he is a Jew and warning his readers that although the facts are there they need not imagine that he could present them entirely uncolored.

Wherefore his book is much more easily interpreted than he tried to maintain an entirely impartial attitude.

With the historical fact there is a wealth of interpretation and periodical stoppages while Kastein reasons out his own and his people's position at the moment. The phos has passion and flow, and, while sometimes it is a little difficult, there is usually a clear concept underlying it.

Gentiles will appreciate particularly their opportunity to read a Jewish evaluation of Jesus, Paul, John and kindred New Testament characters; Jews will rejoice in a brilliant and balanced interpretation of their heritage.

Some Novels

The week has been rich in novels. One of them, Virginia Hersch's "Storm Beach," has also to do with the Jews.

It is the story of a clan in Charleston and particularly of the renunciation by one of them of a Gentile's love, told with a very winning wealth of detail and warmth of style. Although some might feel Judith a little more of a symbol than a person.

Gladys Hasty Carroll is also well up toward the head of the class with her "As The Earth Turns." It is the moment-to-moment record of a Maine family through a year that brings birth, death, love, comedy, tragedy—nearly everything a year could bring, in fact. The book is notable for its vast detail and for the fact that the detail is never without point.

LIKES PIRATES AS CHAMPIONS

Picks Pittsburgh As Club To Beat In National League For Pennant.

By Alan Gould

George Gibson, Pittsburgh's greying master mind, has himself a fine looking ball club these days, a confident, cohesive team that is going to be hard to stop short of a pennant.

One look and I'm about ready to string along with the consensus which picked the Pirates to engage in what has come to be known as the "great fall classic." They still have the Cardinals to lick, but their superior balance should tell down the back stretch.

It's a baseball treat to watch Gibson's boys perform. They're not "cocky," but they give you the impression of a serene confidence in their ability. There isn't a trace of strain. They play with a grin, snapping up hard hit balls and flipping them around the infield with an ease and assurance that borders on carelessness. They're relaxed.

I watched them pin back Carl Hubbell's ears in their season's debut at the Polo Grounds. They worked the great southpaw over for eight hits, taking the kinks out of his renowned "screw" ball before it had a chance to break.

The score was close, 7 to 6, but for some reason or other you got the idea along about the second inning that the Pirates had it wrapped up. Every time the Giants pulled up close, the Traynors and Waners and Lindstroms just let out another notch and soon it wasn't close any more. They made it look easy.

They Won't Crack Again

There no longer can be any doubt that in young Floyd Vaughan and Tony Piet the Pirates have one of the classiest keystone combinations extant. They are smooth, effortless afield and they're a headache to opposing pitchers who like to ease up on the bottom end of the batting order.

It was this pair that "cracked" late last summer and left the hole through which the Cubs slipped to the pennant. Unless the eyes deceive, it won't happen again. They look steady, sure of themselves.

Vaughan gobbled up an easy roller, set himself and lined a peg three feet over Gus Suhr's head at first base. It let in a run and left a couple more on the sacks. Someone said Vaughan looked shaky.

The next batter slammed a vicious hopper just out of Traynor's reach at third. Vaughan raced over lunged and speared it with his glove. Deliberately he straightened up, set himself and plunked a perfect strike into Suhr's glove to stop the rally cold. That was the pay-off on the 1933 Vaughan as far as I'm concerned.

Setting In The Sun

No matter how great or how smart a ball player old Honus Wagner was in his day, it is extremely doubtful he will be of any material assistance to Gibson in his role of coach. You can't stay away from any game very long and retain that fine edge.

Possibly as a sentimental gesture, Hans is being planted on the third base coaching line at the start of the contests, but after an inning or two the former idol usually retires to the dugout or lounges along the nearby boxes and chairs with admirers. He's still a great attraction.

"Yes," said the ticket-seller of a small movie house, "occasionally a patron leaves the window forgetting his change."

"What do you do in a case like that?"

"Oh," said the ticket-seller, "I always rap on the window with a sponge."

ATLANTIC CITY MOVES TO KEEP ABSECON LIGHT

Famous Landmark, Now Two Blocks In-shore, Obscured By Hotels.

U. S. PUTS BEACON AT END OF PIER

Atlantic City, May 22—Atlantic City moved today to save its most famous landmark, the Absecon lighthouse.

Governmental economy and a growing Atlantic City, which had lessened the usefulness of the beacon, were the two reasons given for abandonment.

After it was reported that a contract had been signed with the federal government for placing a strong light on the end of the Steel Pier, George R. Putnam, commissioner of lighthouse, at Washington, admitted considering dispensing with the seventy-nine-year-old Absecon light as a part of the general thrift program.

But in addition to the federal economy, another reason for giving up the light, it was learned, is that part of its value has been impaired because of its present location.

When the lighthouse was erected in 1854, it stood on the beach and was often entirely surrounded by water. Now the locality is built up and the lighthouse is two blocks from the ocean.

The result is that big hotels on Vermont avenue, near Oriental avenue, have obscured the light for coastwise steamships.

While the light is still clearly visible to ships nineteen miles at sea those running closer to the shore cannot see it because of the buildings.

These vessels are in the most danger, for the primary object of the lighthouse is to warn against the Brigantine Shoals, the "graveyard" of many ships, which lie northeast of the lighthouse and extend seven miles out to sea.

It is for this reason that the gov-

WOULD RETIRE NAVY OFFICERS

Plan To Cut Out 500 Officers By Economy Bill Is Bitterly Opposed.

Washington, May 22 (AP).—A reduction of between 500 and 800 officers in the navy is contemplated in the economy program now in formulation.

A saving of $55,000,000 will be made in next year's operating expenditures of the navy, as compared with those of the present fiscal year ending July 1.

This will be offset by an expenditure of $46,000,000 for naval construction under the public works program.

There are now about 5,500 officers in the navy. A special committee, headed by Assistant Secretary Roosevelt, will decide on those to be retired. The enlisted personnel is expected to be cut from 79,000 to 77,000. A 10 per cent cut also will be made in the civilian employees who now total 2,100.

What ships are to be built under the construction program will be recommended by the general board of the navy, with the final decision in the hands of President Roosevelt.

will be working regularly in pictures.

Snow-white, he is a Siberian Samoyede, very rare, valued by his owner, Gordon S. Davidson, at $5,000—but no money could buy him," Davidson insists—and the Pacific Coast Kennel club places the same valuation on his dogish highness.

On The Road Too

Sammy Boy's beauty and intelligence have enabled him to make personal appearance tours without performing a single trick. The rest of his "public life" has included posing at fashion shows where his looks set off feminine models strikingly, and in posing with lovely movie stars who would like to own him but can't. He played in some aviation shorts with Bobby Trout, even before plans were laid to put him in longer pictures.

"I list his telephone number rather than my own," says Davidson, "because everybody knows him and nobody remembers my name."

He gets about 50 letters a week addressed simply to "Sammy Boy, Los Angeles."

A Dog's Life, Indeed

Four-year-old Sammy has a personal valet, a Chinese boy who does nothing except attend to Sammy's wants.

Another aristocratic dog in the movies, only temporarily, was the English sheep dog they persuaded a Pasadena society woman to lend for a picture. He rides to work daily in a limousine, and his earnings, to the last dime, go to charity. One condition of the contract was that his mistress be allowed to remain on the set with him, and that her name be kept secret.

SHANNON DAM BESIAGED

BY HORDE OF MUSKRATS Limerick, Ireland (AP).—The safety of the great Shannon power station is threatened by muskrats.

Their existence, unknown until recently, was revealed when three were shot near the Shannon works. It is stated that two of the animals escaped from captivity in 1929 and that hundreds of thousands are believed to exist now in Ireland.

The government has started a campaign of extermination and has prohibited importation of the rodents.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

On Friday evening last, about 10
o'clock, an unusual phenomenon
was exhibited in the heavens—a silvery arch reaching from east to west, about one half the apparent size of the milky way. It remained visible for a considerable time. It together with the light to the north
all the evening, were, no doubt, the Aurora Borealis, in one of its fantastic forms.

Married.—On Tuesday last, by the Rev. Alexander Boyd, the Rev.
James C. Watson, pastor of the Presbyterian church in this place
and Conowago, to Miss Margaret L.
Wynkoop, eldest daughter of Mr.
Jonathan Wynkoop, of Bucks county.

On Thursday last, by the Rev.
Charles B. Young, Charles Bell, of this borough, to Miss Priscilla Huff,
of the vicinity of Emmitsburg, Md.

On the same day by the Rev. C.
G. McClean, Jacob Hewitt to Miss
Eliza Wright daughter of John Wright, both of Menallan township.

On Tuesday, the 2d inst., by the Rev. Samuel Gutelius, James Leibley,
of Cumberland county, to Miss Sarah Bear, of Mountjoy township,
Adams county.

Lotteries are to be abolished in the state of New York on the 31st of December next—at the same time
that they become extinct in Pennsylvania. The new constitution of New York says that "No lottery shall hereafter be authorized in this state."

Died.—On the 7th inst. Mrs.
Sara Neely, wife of Jonathan Neely,
deceased, of this county, aged 71
years.

On Thursday last, George Tho-
man, of Straban township.

A very unfortunate accident took place in Hamilton township on Wednesday last. Whilst Joseph Pitzer was engaged upon his porch
in loading a gun for the purpose of shooting some crows, it was discharged and the whole load lodged in the back (near the shoulder) of his wife, who was sitting in the room. We understand that hopes are now entertained of her recovery.

The river Susquehanna was higher last week, it is said, than it has been for thirty years. A great quantity of lumber has been carried off. We learn that part of the new Columbia bridge has been destroyed,
and that on Thursday last three men were drowned near Columbia,
in the attempt to save some lumber—one of whom, it is reported, is John Paxton (of Isaac), formerly of this county.

(Ad.) Gettysburg Guards 1.—A private meeting of the company is requested at the house of John B.

Read The Bible With Us Daily

For the Lord God will help me;
therefore shall I not be confounded;
therefore have I set my face like a flint, and I know that I shall not be ashamed.

He is near that justifieth me;
who will contend with me? let us
stand together: who is mine adversary? let him come near to me.
Behold, the Lord God will help me; who is he that shall condemn me? lo, they all shall wax old as a garment; the moth shall eat them
up.

Who is among you that feareth
the Lord, that obeyeth the voice of thy servant, that walketh in darkness, and hath no light? let him trust in the name of the Lord,
and stay upon his God.

Behold, all ye that kindle a fire,
that compass yourselves about with sparks: walk in the light of your fire, and in the sparks that ye have kindled. This shall ye have of mine hand; ye shall lie down in sorrow.— Isaiah 50:7-11.

March in Gettysburg, on Thursday evening, the 23d inst., at 7 o'clock to take into consideration the propriety of making some alteration in the uniform of the company and the transaction of other important business. May 20.

SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO
Escape From Prison.—An Irish-
man, whose name we have not learned, who was imprisoned in our jail for some slight misdemeanor,
left his lodgings for parts unknown
about midnight Saturday. He was liberated by an outsider, who first dug through the outer wall, then
by removing some bars at the cellar
window of the sheriff's residence, obtained entrance into the passage
and with a piece of wire, opened the lock of the prisoner's cell.

New Buildings.—The trowel
and the plane are again active in our midst. Quite a number of new buildings are going up—others
projected—most of which will be creditable to their proprietors and the town.

The site for the new court house
is rid of all the old buildings and the masons are expected to commence the cellar wall in a day or
two. Abraham Tawney has contracted for the stone and brick work. John and Francis Cole will supply the main part of the timber at $15 per thousand feet, about the usual price.

The masons will today begin work
upon John Hoke's warehouse, corner
of Railroad and Carlisle streets.
Ex-Sheriff Thomas is putting up
a very snug two-story brick residence on York street, nearly opposite the Globe Inn.

Peter Thorn has near completion
a two story brick dwelling in Washington street, near the college. Robert Tate has erected and now occupies, a two story frame dwelling immediately north of him and Mr.
Helligher is putting up a comfortable brick adjoining on the south.
William Steinhour is building a home on the Mummaburg road east of Helligher's. This part of the town is much improved and will be more so.

The old McClellan property on the north side of town is being repaired
by Mrs. Vance its late purchaser.
The location is a most excellent
one.

The large brick house, corner of Railroad and Carlisle street, now owned by D. McConaughy and John Hornier, is undergoing thorough repairs to adapt it to hotel and business purposes. The new "entrance"
looks well—quite an improvement.

We understand that Henry Fahnestock
is making arrangements for the erection of a handsome three story
brick dwelling on Baltimore street,
nearly opposite the store and adjoining James F. Fahnestock.

Joseph Martin is putting up a two-story frame building, for dwelling or shops, near the east end of York street. John Kuhn intends erecting, after harvest, a two story brick residence on the Bonaugh-town road, a few lots below Christian Benner's.

A. M. Townsley has under way a frame dwelling, on High street, below Washington, intended for a carriage work shop.

By a notice in our paper, it will be observed that our worthy friends,
Hon. J. B. Danner and Judge Ziegler, have retired from the mercantile business, in which they have been engaged for some years with profit to themselves, we hope, and certainly with every disposition to accommodate the public. Their business has now fallen into the hands of their sons—both of whom are active business men, and cannot fail to obtain the confidence of the public.

University of Washington, with two 4:20 milers, is doing little worrying in connection with this event. Ken Wills and Ernie Perfe-
ment are their names.

THE MISER
Somewhere within a hovel still he stays,
Counting the coins which he has saved for years.
In all the hardships of these dreary
days
Nothing unusual to him appears.

No one there is who thinks of him
as friend,
His hoarded money still is boxed
secure.
He has not lost what he refused to lend,
Of every buried talent he is sure.

He chuckles to himself and counts
his gold
And glories in the fact he has it still.
His heart, just like his hovel, bleak
and cold,
Is not disturbed because the winds
grow chill.

Though thousands suffer, he is used
to pain;
Though all about him now have
less to brave,
Unchanged his ways of living still remain,
Who robbed himself his own few
coins to save.

I fancy I can see him gloating o'er
His safe-kept money buried in a can
In some deep corner of his hovel
floor—
A poor, bleak, cheerless hovel of a man.

FASHION HINTS

By Rita Ferris
Paris (AP)—Fabric flowers are a sign of springtime chic.

They are made of novel fabrics,
used in new ways and employed to give that fashionable fillip which marks the smart woman.

Violets of white pique or organdie,
camellias of natural-colored linen,
anemones of braided cotton and gar-
denias of oilcloth, leather and wool
are among the favorite fashion flowers. Generally they are sparingly used, from one to three being the smartest number.

Match Hat, Bag, Gloves
The newest thing is a fabric flower to match a hat, bag or gloves. A beige linen camellia poised at the neckline of a green wool frock steps out with a beige linen bag and gloves, a cluster of red leather anemones accents the collar of a grey crepe frock finished with a red leather belt; and a cluster of white organdie violets tucked into the waistline of a black chiffon afternoon frock worn with a toque made
of white flower petals.

Camellias Blossom Out
White pique camellias, hat and gloves with a dark blue crepe frock provide another variation of the theme.

Dining at the Cafe de Paris before the theatre the other evening a smart woman wore an evening tail-leur of black satin with a shell pink satin blouse and three shell pink camellias poised at the collarline of her little jacket.

Roses fashioned from white or-gandie were seen giving a chic touch
to an evening wrap of American Beauty red velvet worn at one gala.

Hats Dress Up Too
Hats carry on the flower song.
One designer makes a high turban
of coarse stiffened black tulle with a band of little white and gold flowers across the front, another poises
two pearly camellias on the top of a toque of brown Rumba straw.

Washington Highlights

By Herbert Plummer
Washington — By-election year
is almost 12 months away and the presidential election year is much further removed, but the principal theme of campaign speeches for both of these events can, perhaps,
be set down at this moment.

Unless all signs fail political stump speeches of the future are destined to be constructed on and around
one big issue—Have the democrats and President Roosevelt shelved the congress and the constitution?

Republicans likely will attempt to make much of this. They are murmuring about it even now. Of course, at the present, with "emergency conditions" still existing,
they are not doing much more than murmur.

But it will be different when the Republicans attempt to make their first tab at a come-back in the congressional elections of next year. And the democrats know it.
Those Washington political observers who long ago formed a healthy admiration of Mr. Roosevelt as a politician are pointing to a paragraph in his "second report" to the country recently as an illustration of what he expects.

Thunder Brewing
"The only thing that has been happening," said the president, "has been (for congress) to designate the president as the agency to carry out certain of the purposes of congress. This was constitutional and in keeping with the past American traditions."

It is only necessary to glance
over the record of the present congress to see where the republicans
will look for their campaign thunder. The discretionary or permissive authority conferred on the president by congress is impressive.
And before the special session is

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

"IT COULDN'T BE DONE—BUT HE DID IT!"

IN AN unknown grave, in Georgetown, South Carolina, lie the ashes of Capt. Moses Rogers, and somewhere, buried in the sand and earth of Long Island Sound, lie the stout oak timbers of the S. S. Savannah, which proudly sailed from Savannah, Georgia, May 22, 1819—under her own steam—for Europe!

Twenty-nine days later Liverpool harbor was amazed to see entering her the first ship to cross the Atlantic by steam. The event was noted all over the world as a real thriller. Many important ports and countries were visited about Europe, and the little ship—only 100 feet in length and 350 tons burden—was admired and visited by Royalty and the distinguished of that day.

Even in the face of that remarkable achievement, however, there were skeptics. People commented about the event as merely a wild experiment that would come to nothing—as many did after the first airplane crossed the English Channel and the Atlantic Ocean.

This event of 114 years ago came vividly to my mind the other day when there was launched in the United States, its latest triumph in ship building—the "Washington," a great giant, 705 feet long, weighing 24,000 gross ton, and driven by huge oil engines! Like a mighty palace, with everything thinkable for the comfort of travellers—to span that same ocean in less than the fingers on one of our hands.

And today, from the ports of every nation in the world, daily depart great liners, propelled by steam and oil—knitting the thought and progress and aspiration of the world into one mammoth network of cooperation!

And so it is that this day has been set apart in the United States as "Maritime Day." I wish I had the space to tell of the interesting facts and the complete story of that little S. S. Savannah, and of that other ship that left Pictou, Nova Scotia, and crossed the Atlantic, fathered by the famous Cunard, and which was the forerunner of the present great Cunard line of ships.

Endless are the achievements of man! The youth of today will probably live to eat breakfast in New York and dine in London on the same day—thanks to huge air liners which will undoubtedly make this possible.

Be all this as it may, let us today drink a silent toast to the intrepid Capt. Moses Rogers, who piloted that little S. S. Savannah across the Atlantic ocean by steam 114 years ago!

over these powers will be increased.

There's the emergency banking act, for example. Congress clearly assigned authority to the president in this bill that it usually keeps for itself.

The farm relief bill containing
it does the Thomas amendment for inflation of the currency is another.

A Lengthening List

Then there is the economy act,
carrying with it presidential authority to make vast reductions in payments to veterans, government employees as well as abolition and reorganization of different federal agencies.

The bill creating the so-called
"conservation corps" and the arms
embargo are others.

Also, there is the bill to regulate the railroads of the country, the bill
to stimulate, mobilize and regulate industry and the Tennessee valley improvement act.

And there may be others enacted
such as presidential power to adjust tariffs, make trade agreements and negotiate on war debts.

Republican campaign orators see
all of these as fertile sources
from which to draw material for their blasts.

Football teams of Georgia and Auburn will meet again on neutral
ground next fall at Columbus, Ga., just as they have since 1916. The 1933 game originally was scheduled at Birmingham, Ala.

NARROWLY MISSED RARE FEAT

Chicago (AP)—Russel Van Atta,
sensational young Yankee pitcher,
came close to a rare feat last season with St. Paul in the American association. The day after a team mate, Slim Harris, had pitched a no-hit game against Kansas City he held the Blues hitless for eight and two-thirds innings. Another out and the first two consecutive hitless games
by staff-mates would have been on the books!

tercollegiate record of 14.9 seconds

Coast Girl Good Baseball Player

Seattle, (AP).—The best girl
baseball player in the Northwest—
but no team to play with, is the plight of Gertrude Harty, who can perform around first base as well
as a lot of young men.

Gertrude had an honest-to-goodness contract with a Seattle semi-pro team last year. It all started when the team played an exhibition contest with a touring troupe of girls and Miss Harty was added to the local lineup. After that she remained with the men's team and her work at first base continued in the city league records.

The girl learned her baseball
from her dad, Jim Harty, a former semi-pro player around the Northwest. She likes to pitch and play first base.

Fans Coming To Cheer For Primo

Rome (AP).—Some highly colored, fluent, and native advice for Primo Carnera may be expected

the big Italian steps into it with Champion Jack Sharkey, June 20.

A committee of sport writers is organizing an Italian pilgrimage to New York for the purpose of cheering the man mountain in his own language.

The writers' plan has been sponsored by the Italian Pugilistic federation and a sizable junket is expected. After the fight the Italian fans will visit the Chicago exposition, Washington, D. C., and other points of interest.

NEWSREEL MAN
FAVORS SMITH

Cameraman Says Al Smith Is Most Interesting Subject; Calls Wales "Good Egg."

By William Gaines

New York—Al Smith is the most interesting subject in town for a newsreel cameraman, says Al Gold, veteran celebrity "shooter."

Gold became a full-fledged cameraman with the Gaumont News (remember?) when it was owned by General Gaumont of France. When William Fox started his news reel Gold joined the organization. He has been with it through shifts and changes for 15 years.

"Al Smith has been my assignment ever since he became governor of New York," Gold told me. "The reason I find him interesting is because, no matter what comes, he never takes off from being Al Smith, human being. He never assumes an attitude for the camera. Most of the time in rare good humor, when he is gruff he's gruff, and take it or leave it."

"The only time he actually insisted on being photographed in a particular way was when he had a boll on his cheek and asked us to be satisfied with a profile."

Studios "Shipwreck"

It seems that "Shipwreck" Kelly, the flag-pole sitter, is a very serious student of his art. Gold rates him high among his interesting subjects and calls Kelly "the latter-day St. Simeon Stylites."

This is because "Shipwreck" is "as fanatical about being the best flagpole sitter as his predecessor in pole-sitting was in doing his penance."

"And the fact that he is the best and will not fake as some of his imitators do makes him something, although I don't know what."

"He studies and reads about the activities of his rivals with as much concern as some big business men study their rivals and markets. And there's no partnership for him."

"Competition is the life of his business, and let any man outsize him 'on the level' and he'll find a pole somewhere to start out to surpass him."

Democratic Wales

Gold has covered the Prince of Wales on all his visits to this country and Canada.

"He never seems to grow old," said Gold. "Although some day he'll be top man of the great British empire, he's more democratic and pleasant about posing than some momentary news midget."

"When he's not officially being the Prince of Wales he's a good egg with a boyish interest in everything about myself and my camera."

Gold says he never will get tired of making pictures of Babe Ruth.

"His freshness and health are contagious. But you have to watch him every minute or he'll play some practical joke on you."

"Once while I was making a picture of him on a gymnasium he hid all my equipment in a steam box."

Jimmy Walker is one of Gold's great favorites. The wise-cracking ex-mayor had a peculiar gift of putting strange clippers, $6.25 a 6.50; best woolskins $7.25; native springers largely $7.50; few $7.75. Slaughter sheep and lambs: Spring lambs, good and choice, $6.50; medium, $6.75 to $6.50; lambs, 90 pounds down, good and choice, $6.15 to $6.00; common and medium $4.50 to $6.25; 90-98 pounds good and choice $6.65 to $6.50; 98-110 pounds good and choice $5.75 to $6.00; over 90-150 pounds good and choice $2.25 to $3.10; all weights common and medium $1.50 to $2.50.

ANCIENT ROMAN FORTRESS FOUND ATOP SAHARA HILL

Algiers (AP)—A fine Roman fort has been discovered 40 miles from Tamanrasset, in the heart of the Algerian Sahara, by a French savant, Professor Reygasse.

It is a vast stone structure on top of a hill, containing eleven chambers, and is in a perfect state of preservation.

The building, locally known as the Tomb of Ahalessa, was supposed to be a Touneg mausoleum, the grave of a Targui princess having been found there years ago.

A close inspection by Professor Reygasse disproved this. In addition to evidence furnished by the nature of the construction, he found relics of Roman origin.

RED SOX BUSY
IN REBUILDING

New Program Of Boston Sox Promises To Mould Powerful Aggregation.

By Alan Gould

Anyone returning from, say, a three-months' visit to the south pole, where he had been without news of the sporting world, probably would rush right out and have his eyes examined after reading the following item from Boston way:

"The Red Sox announce they have obtained Pitcher Lloyd Brown and Catcher Rick Ferrell from the St. Louis Browns for Catcher Mervin Shea and CASH." (The "caps" are mine.)

It's been more years than Boston fans care to remember since they feasted their weary orbs on a morsel like that. So far as I can recall, not since Harry Frazee began demobilizing a great Red Sox team after the war and transferring the cash into his other enterprises.

In recent years the Sox owners, handicapped by a lack of cash resources, have been constant traders and sellers, but seldom indeed have they gone into their own depleted treasury to obtain talent. Practically all their purchases have been from the minors and even then it was noticeable that they generally managed to send along a player or two in exchange.

Eddie Won't Be Rushed

Now that Business Manager Eddie Collins has started dispensing a few samples from Owner Bob Yawkey's millions, however, you can get set for some of the fanciest buying and trading seen in the American league in many seasons.

Collins isn't in any great hurry and won't be rushed. This is the first important deal he has sealed since he and the enthusiastic young Yawkey took over the reins. I wouldn't be surprised even if Yawkey has fretted a little at Eddie's delay. But Collins is building his fences slowly, and strong.

When he does make a deal, you

SEIZE BUTLER, KIDNAP THREAT

Former Convict Trapped As He Gets Package Left By Broker.

East Orange, N. J., May 22 (AP)—An ex-convict former butler was arrested Friday charged with extortion and threatening with death the son of Orville G. Drake, socially prominent broker.

William G. Carlson, formerly employed in the household of the broker at South "Orange," was pounced upon by policemen as he reached into the shrubbery at Wattessing park for a package left there by Drake. It was to contain $8,000.

Carlson, who is 33 and whose record shows he served a term in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, made a statement to police in which he said he had asked for money from Drake as a loan.

The Drake family's period of anxiety began two weeks ago when the first communication harbored ill for Orville, Jr., 2, called "Jimmy." There were several telephone calls and notes.

Letter Is Climax
The climax was reached Tuesday in the following letter, received by the socially prominent broke.

"Place money in a bag with one-half pound of dirt and tie neatly. Go without firearms in your automobile Thursday night at 9:30 alone to the first street lamp on the east side of Glenwood avenue just north of Dodd street. Flash your headlights four times. Walk along for a distance of 200 feet, and when you hear your name, Ducky, called, pass the package through the iron fence. Return to your car and go home. If I see any agents or police, why death won't be enough."

Ducky is a name by which Drake is known to his close friends.

A later telephone call changed the plans. Drake was to throw the package over the fence instead of passing it through.

Policemen waited all night, but no one appeared. As the guards were changed in the morning Carlson appeared. He was quickly borne down and taken to headquarters for vigorous questioning.

Small Cyclone

Continued from Page One)
gan to whistle," he told a reporter for The Gettysburg Times, Sunday, "and the next thing I knew, I was blown about 50 feet by the wind. I was not lifted off my feet, but I was just unable to stop moving."

The gable end of the barn on the Ross farm was blown in by the twister.

Trees in the yards of Robert Trimmer, Mrs. Alice A. Cashman and R. D. Myers, all residing near the Pines church, were blown down. Hundreds of residents of Gettysburg and Adams county viewed the damage at the Pines church on Sunday.

At the farm of H. E. Shriver, five and a half miles north of Gettysburg on the Biglerville road, the wind ripped about half the sheet roof from the barn and blew in the gable end. Part of the tin roof was found in a woods a quarter of a mile away. One piece of the tin roof was found wrapped around a tree in the woods.

At Mummasburg, the twister bashed in the end of an unused brick school house.

In Gettysburg, the wind felled trees and broken large pieces from others. A tourist, Charles Mayhew, of Florida, had his car parked on East Middle street in front of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arch Mc-

Clean. The wind blew a large tree in front of the McClean home onto the top of Mayhew's machine, wedging it so tightly that it was necessary to cut down the tree.

Residents of Biglerville, who saw the cyclone approaching, said it had the customary funnel shape and emitted a piercing whistle. As usual with such phenomena, the cyclone did not follow a straight line, but dipped and raised which accounts for the damage in various parts of the county.

A huge poplar tree in the yard of Bernard Stock, North Stratton street, was twisted considerably by the stiff wind. The tree will die, although it was not uprooted or torn. Another tree in the same yard was torn and thrown across the home of C. D. Stallsmith.

Many trees were damaged in Gettysburg and countless signs of various size blown down. Lights in the Majestic theatre threw the playhouse in darkness for several minutes Saturday afternoon but the performance was continued after a brief interruption.
